Dr. Paul Urie, laboratory medical director for UVRMC, said that 300 patients have been tested for AIDS and that there has not been any cause for positive results from the blood received from LDS Hospital.

Several news stories reported Thursday that Myron R. Laub, medical director of LDS Hospital's blood bank, voluntarily resigned from his position at the hospital. He was in charge of the blood bank's operations when the FDA suspended the hospital's license.

Two other blood bank managers were placed on administrative leave after Laub's resignation.

Their suspension will remain pending until the in-house investigation is completed, Gomez said. He also added the investigation should continue for at least two more weeks.

SARAJEVO, Bosnia-Herzegovina — A U.S. peace initiative, promoted by diplomats over Bosnian Serb resistance, was mired Monday in new problems: the unprecedented battlefield gains of the Serbs' enemies.

While NATO airstrikes battered the rebel Serbs and forced them to agree to withdraw their heavy weapons from around Sarajevo, the army of the Muslim-led government and allied Croat forces have taken huge chunks of territory from the Serbs.

Croat and government forces claim they have captured some 2,400 square miles, or just over 12 percent of Bosnia, in the past week

The Bosnian Serbs' losses are so severe that many observers are afraid the army of Serb-dominated Yugoslavia may plunge into the war to rescue them. In addition, the gains by Croat forces have rekindled fears among Muslims of being squeezed out by Croats and Serbs.

U.S. envoy Richard Holbrooke, whose shuttle diplomacy across the Balkans had brought new hopes of peace, was

After meeting with Serbian President Slobodan Milosevic, the region's most powerful figure, Holbrooke acknowledged that there was only "a little progress."

A member of Milosevic's delegation, which is negotiating for the Bosnian Serbs, said the two sides were far from reaching an agreement.

Bosnian Serbs, armed and encouraged by Milosevic, captured about 70 percent of Bosnia after the war broke out in April 1992. The current peace plan calls for their share of Bosnia's territory to be reduced to 49 percent of the country, but after the recent losses they may hold less than that.

"It's about 50-50 ... and that's a cautious estimate," said U.N. spokesman Lt. Col. Chris Vernon, noting that by some estimates, the Serbs already hold less than half of

The United Nations is deeply concerned by the offensive and appealed for "restraint, especially in the light of the looming humanitarian catastrophe around the town of Banja Luka," said spokesman Chris Gunness.

Banja Luka is the Serbs' northern stronghold, and is important not only in battlefield strategy but because it is an industrial center.

The Bosnian Serbs, who have acknowledged heavy losses, claimed Monday that they have stabilized defense lines, and will defend Banja Luka, which is jammed with tens of thousands of refugees.

"Our only strategic goal is to defend the Banja Luka region," Jovan Zametica, spokesman for Bosnian Serb leader Radovan Karadzic, told The Associated Press.

A Bosnian army source confirmed the Serbs had strengthened their defensive lines, and said government and Croat troops were encountering

The pattern of the fighting has given rise to speculation that the Bosnian Serbs staged a tactical withdrawal from western towns, preferring to appear to lose in battle what they would be forced to relinquish at the negotiating table. But the Serbs also were weakened by two weeks of NATO bombing that damaged their communications and hampered military coordination. The airstrikes were halted for 72 hours last Thursday to allow the Serbs to comply

Powell undecided on party

WASHINGTON - Showing another sign of his discomfort with conservative Republicans on social issues, Colin Powell criticized proposals to deny welfare to legal immigrants and cut off health care and other benefits for children of illegal aliens Monday in an interview with The Associated

The interview came as Powell sets out on a cross-country book tour that will take him to two dozen cities by the end of October. As he travels, he will ponder whether to enter the 1996 presidential race. He said today he had ruled out running as a Democrat and would decide by November whether to run as a Republican.

Many Republican strategists — and two declared GOP candidates - are suggesting Powell would be an odd fit if he joined the GOP field, citing his support of abortion rights, affirmative action and gun control, and his criticism of GOP welfare reform proposals and, in his view, insensitivity-to racial issues.

"We're not going to change the party to make him comfortable." Senate Majority Leader Bob Dole, the GOP presidential front-runner, said Sunday on ABC Another GOP hopeful, Texas Sen. Phil Gramm, said of Powell in an NBC interview: "I think his views in some way reflect more the views of the Democratic Party than the Republican Party.

Monday, Powell suggested such criticism was proof he was "shaking up the political system."

Powell derided the conservative proposals on illegal immigration as "simplistic" and anathema to the American tradition of welcoming immigrants, including his Jamaican-born parents. He said he favored tougher border controls and numeric limits on legal immigration but said politicians "have to stop demonizing" immigrants and others in their pursuit of votes.

Powell said illegal immigrants did not deserve U.S. government benefits, but took issue with a Gramm proposal that would prohibit legal immigrants from collecting welfare for five years after they enter the country.

He is a comfortable fit with Republicans on economic issues.

And for all of his criticism of Republicans on social issues, he said Democrats were too quick to endorse government as the solution to all problems and too eager to divide Americans by using class warfare.

"They need political CPR," Powell said of the Democratic Party.

Students who feel their rights as enants have been violated can seek ustice at the Off-Campus Housing Office free of charge.

The office handles about 400 to 500 disputes each year, said John Pace, manager of the Off-Campus Housing Office. The most common disputes are over contracts, deposits, cent payments and cleaning and physical conditions, he said.

"Those are common problems that occur and reoccur, but each case is different in and of itself," Pace said.

The disputes are usually about a small amount of money, such as a cleaning charge, said Christine Hellbusch, a third-year BYU law

Student tenants who are having problems with their landlords should first try to work things out with each other, said John Kelleher, a thirdyear law student. If the problem isn't resolved, the next step is to go through mediation, which is done through the Off-Campus Housing

During mediation, the two opposing parties meet together with a mediator from the Off-Campus Housing Office, to try to work out their concerns.

"We're (as mediators) neutral and impartial; we're not judges," Pace said. "It's up to the parties to negotiate and reach a settlement that's satisfactory to both of them.'

Kelleher said mediation is like marriage counseling. Problems discussed during mediation are confidential, he said. No record of how the parties arrived at an agreement is

Although Pace said 80 to 90 percent of people who go through mediation reach a settlement, if an agreement cannot be made, either the mediator or either of the two parties can call it off, Kelleher said. The dispute then goes to the last step - arbitration

Arbitration resembles a mini-court with a jury, Kelleher said. The jury is comprised of a landlord representative, a student representative and a faculty member.

Each party has the option to have student representation by a law student, Kelleher said. The students doing arbitration are those "who. have done well in mock trial competitions, so they have some skill in arguing cases," he said.

by a member of the Off-Campus Housing Office during arbitration.

"We're now just presenting a case as in a court of law," Kelleher said, "The board comes up with one decision and one side wins, unlike mediation," which is a compromise.

Kelleher said arbitration is a better option than going to court, since it "saves a lot of money and aggrava-

"BYU landlords do it (arbitration) to get BYU approval and students still get justice," he said. "It's binding and it's cheap.'

The community also benefits from the program, Hellbusch said, "since the courts don't get burdened with student-landlord disputes."

Hellbusch said the number of cases that go on to arbitration are relatively low, about six each semester.

"A lot (of cases) are getting settled in mediation, which is better for the landlord-student relationship, because that means they agreed,"

Windy Venable, 21, a humanities major from Kilgore, Texas, found that her relationship with her landlord continued to get worse after

Supplies reach needy hurricane victims

CHARLOTTE AMALIE, U.S. Virgin Islands — Military planes delivered food, water and supplies Monday to victims of Hurricane Marilyn, six years to the day after Hurricane Hugo ravaged the Caribbean.

C-130 cargo planes thundered onto the airstrip at St. Thomas, beginning the full relief effort. The island's 51,000 residents lost water, electricity and phones when Marilyn struck Saturday.

National Guard troops and police directed traffic in Charlotte Amalie, the islands' capital, where long lines formed at gasoline stations. The drive from the airport to the resort of Frenchman's Reef, normally a 15minute trip, took 45 minutes Monday.

In the interior, workers cleared roads of power lines and utility poles. A radio station was set up so residents could leave messages for loved ones.

Stacey J. Fredericks sifted through the debris of her home, salvaging clothes she hung on lines stretched across her yard. She pointed to a pile of rubble with a refrigerator and dishwasher protruding.

11-year-old recoups after SLC gang-shooting

SALT LAKE CITY — An 11-year-old boy was upgraded from critical to serious condition on Monday after being shot in the back by an alleged rival gang member.

Andre Thomas, 13, said he and his younger brother, Isaac Thomas Gallegos. had been out Saturday night cruising State Street in a truck with fellow gang members when a carload of gang rivals pulled up behind them.

The two groups flashed gang signs, then a passenger in the car pointed a gun

Several shots were fired. One pierced the cab of the truck another hit Issac, causing him to pass out several minutes later.

A spokeswoman at Primary Children's Medical Center said Isaac remained in intensive care.

Police arrested two men, 20 and 21, and a boy, and booked them into Salt Lake County Jail for investigation of attempted homicide. The boy's age was

A surgeon removed the bullet from Isaac's body, but told his mother, Belinda Gallegos Thomas, that the boy nearly bled to death.

Dahmer cremated; parents fight over brain

MILWAUKEE — Almost a year after being killed in prison, the body of seriaf killer Jeffrey Dahmer was cremated, while his brain was held back as his parents feud over whether to donate it for research.

His father, Lionel Dahmer, of Akron, Ohio, claimed his half of the ashes Sunday, while arrangements were being made for his mother, Joyce Flint, of Fresho, Calif., to receive the rest.

Flint wants her son's brain to be examined to determine whether biological factors influenced his actions. Her ex-husband objected, saying he wishes to put his son's actions behind him.

Nothing could be done with Dahmer's body until Christopher J. Scarver was sentenced in May for beating Dahmer to death in a Wisconsin prison on Nov.

Hospitals restrict drugs to prevent 'super bugs'

SAN FRANCISCO — Hospitals across the country are beginning to restrict the use of their most potent antibiotics and isolate their sickest patients to try to stop the evolution of "super bugs" - germs that resist all known drugs.

Of special concern is the emergence of resistance to vancomycin, an antibiotic that is the sole remaining weapon against some of the most lethal microbes. Since people are most likely to catch antibiotic-resistant germs in hospitals, many are developing strategies to control their spread. Some hospitals, for example, are experimenting with limiting doctors' ability to prescribe vancomycin, since indiscriminate use of the medicine is likely to speed up the evolution of resistant bugs.

At a hospital affiliated with New York Medical College, where several controls were started in the cancer unit, the number of new exposures to vancomycin-resistant enterococci was cut in half. Dr. Marisa Montecalvo, who presented the findings, said infection control specialists worked with cancer doctors to get them to reduce the use of vancomycin.

Central Utah fires continue to burn grasslands

Firefighters Monday renewed their assault on lightning-sparked blazes that had blackened more than 17,000 acres of central Utah grasslands over the

The largest of 15 fires reported late Sunday is the Lava Ridge blaze, which had burned at least 15,000 acres of rangeland, pinion and juniper, said Bert Hart, spokesman for the Bureau of Land Management.

Fight engines and about 20 firefighters kept watch on the fire, located 15 miles northwest of Cove Fort, Sunday night. No injuries were reported, and no structures were threatened.

In western Juab County, the Death Creek fire has been controlled at 2,200 acres. It was burning tinder-dry grasslands 10 miles west of Eureka. About 35 firefighters assisted by the use of two bulldozers had 75 percent of the flames contained late Sunday when winds caused the fire to jump the lines, Hart said. Other fires burning Monday morning ranged from single tree fires and a 15-acre blaze in Poverty Flat near Monroe in Sevier County, to 100 acres in Dog Valley about 12 miles west of Nephi.

The Utah Chapter of the Sierra Club is accusing Dixie National Forest in southern Utah of catering to the local logging mills.

'It's business as usual for Dixie National Forest, using completely spurious pretexts for a cover-up." said Mark Clemens of the Utah Chapter of the Sierra Club.

The current plan of Dixie National Forest is to log 25 million board feet (MMBF) of Ponderosa. Engelmann spruce, and Subalpine fir trees from a 10,000 foot and higher altitude of Boulder Mountain in Garfield County, Clemens said. The site covers just over 15,000 acres.

The extensive logging will damage the delicate environmental balance between the survival of many species of wildlife and the vegetation that sustains them, Clemens said.

Responding to these allegations, Forest Ranger Kevin Schulkosky of the Escalante District said, "Clearly we are very much attuned to these types of things.

The Sierra Club said the project area needs to maintain canopy closure (protection from the sun and sky) necessary to certain species of wildlife. The project area does not currently contain even 70 percent canopy closure over 50 percent of the area even though Dixie claims they will maintain that balance.

Schulkosky said the process the Forest Service goes through when evaluating their project is "very environmentally and tightly controlled."

The present vegetation in the anticipated logging area doesn't meet current environmental needs for the future, Schulkosky said. He also said that every acre contains approximately 2000 trees, only 40-50 of which will be cut down.

Also, the Final Environmental Impact Statement (FEIS) from the Forest Service claims the Engelmann spruce in the area are in danger of being crowded out by Subalpine fir, Schulkosky said.

The Sierra Club said it would be impossible to crowd out the Subalpine

The Sierra Club also said important threatened plant species, of which the Forest service was unaware, have been found at the site.

The Forest Service said the logging will benefit the species of the Northern goshawk, a bird of prey, by improving its habitat. But Northern goshawks have proven adaptability in forests much denser than the project area, the Sierra Club Now even the black bear is being endangered, Clemens said, and the only concern of the current management of the Dixie National Forest is to keep the logging mills running.

Venable's roommate, whose father owned the apartment where Venable lived, told Venable that she and her friend had to move out at the end of December, although they had signed a contract for the entire school year.

Seeing this opportunity to get out of a difficult situation, Venable agreed to leave and thought that since she was essentially being evicted, her contract would no longer be valid.

When Venable and her landlord met in arbitration at the beginning of Winter Semester 1994, she said her landlord accused her of things she never did.

"He said we ruined the apartment, broke some antique chairs, tore the linoleum in the kitchen," Venable said. "I haven't broken anything in an apartment in my life."

Venable, who had already moved out of the apartment at the time of arbitration, ended up paying for half of the damages claimed by her landlord and half of the rent for Winter Semester 1994.

"We had a legal right to live there (during Winter Semester 1994), but it would have been miserable." Venable

Kelleher said in situations like Venable's, the arbitration board tries to "look at general, equitable principles, and come up with what's fair."

He said in cases in which it is one person's word against another person's, it is best to have witnesses, broken items and canceled checks to show proof.

"Sometimes it just comes down to who might be more believable than the other," he said.

Hellbusch said a lot of tenant-landlord problems "arise because students come here and are not sophisticated about contracts — they don't realize they're bound by what it says in there.

She said if more students were aware of what was in their contracts. a lot of problems could be avoided.

Welfare children's needs must be met by Dole bill

A historic challenge faces the Senate as it votes on the Dole welfare-reform plan today repairing the broken welfare system. Politicians on both sides of the aisle are already lining up to redefine the system as a welfare-to-work program. While this idea is laudable, these men and women can vote to pass the punitive Dole plan or seek a better solution.

Republicans discussed the measure's $70 billion of spending cuts before C-Span cameras Friday in a bicameral party meeting at the Capitol. Even President Clinton announced in his weekly radio address Saturday. "Now we must finish the job, and we can't let ideological extremism and politics as usual get in the way.

Nearing the 1996 presidential election. Dole is eager to show his leadership ability by securing passage of the bill. Clinton has reverted to the centrist themes of his "New Covenant" campaign and cleansed himself of any trace of "ideological extremism." Such posturing looks remarkably like "politics as usual

Welfare abuse is clearly a burden on society. Yet is it right for our leaders to turn their backs on the children who have been born into tragic circumstances? As a civilized nation. we have an obligation to protect the welfare of our children. The Senate was right to reject a measure Wednesday that would cap aid to mothers who have more children while collecting welfare benefits. But politics as usual is still threatening the well-being of many children born into poverty, who have no voice in government. The Dole plan, according to a Sunday Associated Press report, "ends Aid to Families with Dependent Children and the federal guarantee of cash assistance." A more restrictive plan passed by the House last March "would put a family cap on benefits, ban them entirely for mothers younger than 18 with children born out of wedlock and cut spending by

These measures do not facilitate the new welfare-to-work plan. They hinder young, single mothers' ability to find work and become self-sufficient. Republicans claim that distributing welfare money through block grants to states rather than through federal entitlements will cure the ailing system. The states will also be given charge of cash aid and child-care

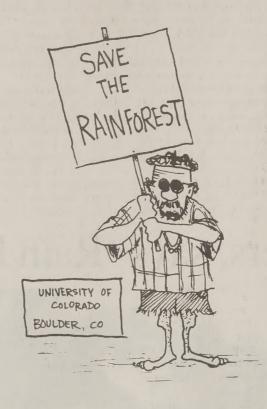

In Utah, a state with a burgeoning economy and tremendous job growth, many assume single mothers receiving welfare assistance are simply lazy. These critics fail to recognize that the education and skills these women have are often inadequate for the technical demands of many local employers. Furthermore, housing costs are rapidly increasing. They also face the problem of finding inexpensive, adequate child care. Rigors such as these can foment the cycle of poverty and prevent welfare recipients from becoming societal contrib-

A popular conservative radio talk show host repeatedly stated his views about welfare reform and entitlements last week, saying, "Just because people are poor does not mean we must treat them with virtue." Conservative politicians quipped, "We have been pushing the wagon long enough. It's time for welfare recipients to get out and help."
While it is undeniably true that the welfare system needs overhauling, we must seek positive change and not abandon the poor who need it most. We should indeed treat the poor with virtue — not by merely giving them handouts. but by offering them a real chance to support themselves.

Rather than denying aid to mothers, government can increase their chance for success by funding their education and child care while they seek a college degree or learn a trade. Small monetary incentives for positive action such as earning good marks in school and having their small children vaccinated have shown positive results in some states. However, punitive restrictions aimed at legislating away irresponsible behavior

Cutting across grass not an honor issue

Viewpoint

by Bryan Wursten

The road to perfect lawns is paved with good intentions, but the latest campaign to coerce BYU students into staying off the grass is irritating and cheapens the principle

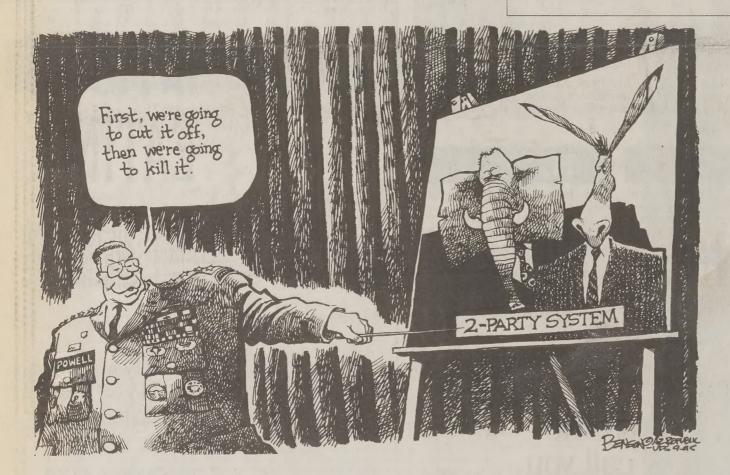

Although I personally believe grass is made for walking on, the high cost of maintaining BYU lawns probably justifies a campaign to encourage students to stay on the sidewalks. However, the slogan "Cougars" Don't Cut Corners — Honor the Y" was a ciples. By focusing on things like shav

First of all, the slogan is irritating. Yes, it is cute, has alliteration and sort of rhymes, but the fact is that cougars do cut corners. They don't walk on sidewalks. A cougar will take the shortest route it can — maybe over a rock, up on a fallen tree and certainly across a manicured lawn. Of course the slogan is using literary license, but the result is corny. invites jokes and grates on my nerves.

More importantly, however, the slogan cheapens the principle of honor. There is a real danger in equating something as unimportant as walking on the grass with the high principle of honor. By doing so, the whole idea of honor loses importance and respect.

Honor has to do with honesty, integral morality, righteousness and other high every morning, crossing at the crosswand wearing socks or staying on the sidewalk "look beyond the mark" and judge ourse and others on unimportant tenets of hol These trivial issues distract us from the meaning of honor.

Recently the offending signs have dis peared from campus, hopefully becar BYU Grounds and BYUSA have recon ered their slogan. In the future, if the gr needs protecting, a simple sign stat 'Please Stay Off The Grass" and an expla tion of the cost of replanting the grass. those in The Daily Universe advertiseme would suffice. There is no need for cut slogans or Honor Code guilt trips.

Killer milk cures roommate's kleptomania

Not too many things beat hanging out with my old roommates, but one thing that does is hanging out with my old roommates at the East Bay McDonald's all-you-can-eat breakfast buffet.

I was lucky. I had pretty good roommates during my single days. Unlike a guy who sent me a two-page letter detailing all his roommate woes. It seems one of this letter writer's roommates liked to take things that weren't his — especially food. The guy, I'll call him Casper (not his real name), got fed up and decided to teach his thieving roommate a lesson. So he poisoned his own milk with sodium hydroxide pellets, "about 0.1 Molar ... enough to severely burn the throat," Casper wrote in his letter. Casper's not too friendly, is he?

What possessed Casper to do such a thing? Was Casper prosecuted? Was Casper's roommate OK? I don't know. All I know from the letter is that Casper's roommate continued to take things (except milk).

The difference between my roommates and Casper is we didn't have any sodium hydroxide — or any Molars for that matter. So when we found things missing, we just took something else from the suspect. For example, I always used Darren's butter, so he took my belt. It was a nice system to use, and no one's throat

It's a great feeling to sit around after a dozen or so McDonald's pancakes and shoot the breeze. That's when we feel a sense of nostalgia. or "deja vu." That's French for the feeling you get when the BYU Marching Band plays a song at a football game and you think to yourself, "Haven't we heard this song 10 times already this evening, and every previous home game as well?" Whilst shooting the breeze over the last of our sausage and syrup. Neil and Bruce told me about their friend, Dudley (not his real name). His real name is Rand Winward. Oops — maybe I shouldn't have used his real name. Oh well, what can they do — take away the credit he didn't earn? (The preceding question was a literary technique called foreshadowing. In layman's terms, that's when a big number 4 is following you around and you always see its shadow.)

It seems a couple of summers ago, Rand wanted to take an easy class, so he signed up for PE 120, which, according to the BYU Undergraduate Catalog, teaches "basic knowledge and skills in cycling and bike maintenance." Sounds like a pretty easy class — if you ever go (more foreshadowing). Right before school started, though, Rand's friends wanted him to take a swimming class with them instead, so he signed up for that class.

At the end of the summer, he called the friendly BYU registration system to get his grade for the swimming class. Rand heard The Voice

"My teacher said I got an A in that class," Rand thought to himself. Then it hit him. Suddenly, Rand realized HE HAD NEVER DROPPED HIS CYCLING CLASS! by Kevin Schlag

It turns out Rand hadn't learned a thing about basic bike maintenance, never went to his cycling class and got a B+ anyway. I can just imagine his teacher going over the grades and saying, "Boy. This Rand kid was a pretty good student, but he didn't even show up for the final. I think I'll have to give him a B+. That'll teach him. What a surprise for the rest of us! We thought we had to go to class to get a good grade, but Rand has shown us that we don't even need to go to a class and we'll get a 3.3 GPA. Talk about grade inflation.

Now, if Rand loses one-half credit of B+ just because my roommates and I were shooting the breeze, I'll feel bad. So Rand, if you do lose that half-credit, I'll give you a half-credit of mine. I'm taking bowling this semester, and I've been twice, so I'll probably get an A. President Lee knows I have plenty of credits to spare. In the meantime, let's get some more pancakes.

Have a question, comment or bizarre BYU bureaucracy story? Tell Kevin about it. Send your letter, with your name and phone number, to 538 ELWC, or e-mail Kevin at

Cattle maligned

In the September 15 issue of The Universe, I read an article on a topic that I find ridiculous: cattle being responsible for global warming. There have been cattle on this planet since before God created Adam. Logical thinkers will probably realize there were at least as many cattle in ancient times as there are today. So, why have these cud-chewers waited until the late 20th century to start emitting methane into the atmosphere and cause global

Let's take a worst case scenario: global warming is occurring (many scientists don't believe in it) and cattle, passing methane gas, are major contributors. What are you going to do about it? If you take the cattle away from farmers and put them in the wild, they will still eat and produce methane. If you try to kill all the cattle, the animal-rights activists will get upset. So what are you going to do if all these radical environmentalists turn out to be right? Nothing, that's what. I wish all these environmentalists would spend their energies researching something useful.

Simple act of kindness

To the Editor:

I attended the Brigham Young game versus the Air Force Falcons. I have severe asthma but went to visit my grandson in the academy. I had tickets but could not climb to the upper level and felt myself struggling for breath badly, as well as the heat.

Two young men in the middle level of the arena overheard me, and one offered to surrender his seat for me and stood throughout the entire game. I was so thankful — they will never know what an act of kindness they did for me, in an instant when I thought I could not move another step.

These men, I learned from where I sat, were a part of the Brigham Young college crowd and general crowd from around that area. Their kindness is unforgettable. I am writing to you although I don't know if he attends your school or had attended it in the past. His name was "Lance," I did not get his last name of course because I'm sure that would have embarrassed him.

Again, many thanks to your wonderful people. What a marvelous example of your teach-

Coach Reid's surgery keeping him off his feet

By JASON ABHAU Universe Sports Writer

Roger Reid, BYU's basketball coach, recently had major surgery performed on his foot to eliminate the extreme pain that Reid was suffering. "It was like walking on glass," Reid

Reid talked about his injury with former NBA basketball player and current NBC broadcaster Bill Walton.
Walton played college ball with the Bruins of UCLA before going on to win several NBA championships with the Boston Celtics and is arguably one of the greatest centers ever to play the game.

Walton was forced to give up the game of basketball because he suffered from chronic foot injuries. He has since had surgery on his feet to relieve the pain and it was this same surgery that Reid underwent. "The operation involved fusing my ankle joint. Much of the cartilage was gone and bone was rubbing against bone," Reid said. The coach will be in a wheelchair or on crutches for the next 3-4 weeks.

Reid said that being unable to walk has been extremely inconvenient but has not limited him in his work. The coaching staff has been busy recruiting for next year.

Congratulations to James Dye, named WAC special teams Player of the Week after his TD-scoring, 84-yard punt return.

. Pen. Bennett pushes for state space programs

By BRAD LEONE Universe Staff Writer

Utah senator's sphere of influxceeds state boundaries by programs like the annual Talk exposition at the Utah Fair, the SpaceTalk conference gan and a future visit by the Shuttle Discovery, Utah Sen. ennett claims to be committed moting the space program in despite the recent trend of govnt cutbacks.

have a lead in space as a nation a people that we can't afford to way," said Sen. Bennett, Rn an interview Friday

Bennett is a member the ressional Appropriations littee, a committee that oversees ASA budget.

re are two reasons I am prothe space program in Utah," tt said. "First, philosophically: I that a great nation must mains explorer mentality and have sire to do new research and conbe looking towards the future. ond: for practical considerathere are a large number of obs involved in space." promoting the space program n Utah through such programs SpaceTalk pavilion at the Utah Fair, Bennett said he hopes to ete families about the future of exploration.

SpaceTalk exposition is in its year, and it was designed to get kids and parents interested in outer budget has been space," said Winter D. Horton, an employee in Bennett's office.

The exposition featured a mocksimulation of a NASA space station that will be launched in 1997.

SpaceTalk also had exhibits from national and local organizations hoping to promote the space program within the state. McDonnell-Douglas, the U.S. Air Force, Utah State University and several local school districts had booths with educational information.

We want the concept of space to become an everyday word so people know how much space contributes to their lives," Horton said.

Bennett is also sponsoring a SpaceTalk '95 Conference that will be held at Utah State University on Sept.

The conference features speeches from Daniel Goldin, a NASA Administrator, Norman Augustine, president of Lockheed Martin Corp. and Lt. Gen. Lester L. Lyles, commander of the Space and Missile Systems Center.

The conference focuses on the future of the space industry in lean budget times, a topic very relevant in an age of increasing cutbacks on government spending.

When asked how the space programs are going to continue in an age of budget cutting, Bennett praised NASA for looking for new ways to do things more efficiently and cheaper.

"There has been a great deal of privatization," Bennett said. "NASA's cut back considerably, but the organization has been enhanced by the cuts as they look for new ways to do

Sen. Bennett had a few words for college students who are interested in the space program and its future.

"I think the student who has the sense of adventure should focus on the way the space program is growing and help take part in the push in this most exciting frontier.'

The month-long focus on the space program will end on Sept. 26 when the Space Shuttle Airport.

'Senator Bennett heard Discovery was moving and he requested it stop in Utah on its way to California," said Larry Shepherd, media and communications specialist for Sen. Bennett.

Visitors will be allowed to see the

Female residents at local complexes fear victimization of returning intruder

By DIXIE HARRIS Universe Staff Writer

A 29-year-old man was arrested and charged with lewd conduct for breaking into women's BYU approved apartments and harassing students.

According to Provo City Police records, Edison S. Verano broke into a women's apartment building at Branbury Park Sept. 8, and peered over a shower curtain as the tenant was taking a shower.

Provo Police records show a similar incident happened an hour earlier at Crestwood apartments. That time, Verano left his phone number at the apartment. Provo police used the number to track and then arrest him for lewd conduct. He was charged with a misdemeanor and then released.

Verano encountered several women from Crestwood apartments that night. Amyjoy Anderson, a junior from Plano, Texas, said she was reading at 1:30 a.m. when she saw a man in her bedroom doorway.

"I freaked," Anderson said. "He startled me, but I didn't feel I was in danger. That's why I didn't call the police."

Later, in an apartment downstairs from Anderson, a dental assistant from Orem, who did not want to be identified, woke to see Verano in her bedroom doorway. She said he began to "pick up" on her. Because she was half-asleep, she gave him her phone number.

Verano returned to Crestwood the next Wednesday night, residents said. Morag Edge, a UVSC student from Middlebury, Va., said she was petrified when she heard a sound at her window.

"I thought I was overly paranoid about the whole 'Ed thing,'" Edge said. "It's been the talk of the apartment for the last week.

Edge said she thought Verano had a flashlight and was trying to get in through the windows.

Crestwood managers are replacing blown-out lights, providing window dowels, and employing a night security guard.

Branbury Park has stopped giving names and apartment numbers out, said Kevin Stuflick, Branbury Park night supervisor. He said it also changed locks on the apartments that were broken into and have employed a security guard.

Tax bill hits corporate pension funds

Associated Press

WASHINGTON Republicans began writing a wideranging tax bill Monday that would cost the working poor money and would encourage corporations to withdraw billions of dollars from pen-

Their goal is to fold the legislation, along with $270 billion in Medicare savings and the $245 billion "Contract With America" tax reduction for families and businesses, into a giant tax and spending bill this fall.

Many provisions, such as extending the tax credit for corporate research and development, are expected to receive the 37-member Ways and Means Committee's bipartisan backing at bill-writing sessions scheduled through Wednesday.

But Democrats were preparing to slam Republicans hard on their proposal to slice $20 billion from the $153 billion projected to be spent over the next seven years on the earned income tax credit, which is designed to help low-income workers stay off welfare.

It also would raise $10 billion over seven years by letting corporations withdraw excess money from their pension funds. Once the money is withdrawn, a practice now prohibited unless the money is used for retiree

Roughly 20 percent of the anticipated $20 billion in savings would come from ending the credit for 4.4 million childless workers. Forty percent would be realized by reducing the eligibility for people receiving Social Security, pension, IRA and annuities income. The rest of the savings would come from trimming the credit (now a maximum of $3,564) for families earning more than $11,620. Cuts would range from a few dollars to

The income limit for a partial credit would be reduced from $28,533 for a family with two children to $27,126 and from $25,119 for a one-child family to $23,608.

The Center on Budget and Policy Priorities said the House proposal would reduce or terminate benefits for 14 million of the credit's 19 million

Other major elements in the new tax bill include:

· An updated Taxpayer Bill of Rights, including an increase from $100,000 to $1 million in the limit on taxpayers suing the IRS for overzealous collection efforts.

• Creation of tax-sheltered medical savings accounts for people with high-deductible health insurance.

• A reduction or repeal in targeted health benefits, it is subject to the cor- tax benefits for corporations, including a phase-out over 10 years in a subsidy benefiting manufacturing companies operating in Puerto Rico and other U.S. territories.

• Extension of some expiring tax breaks, including the exclusion for up to $5,250 of employer-provided tuition assistance. However, after this year, graduate tuition would not be eligible for assistance.
